

Interacting with Your Doctor

by NEWLIFEOUTLOOK TEAM

Alzheimer's Disease - Dialogue in Design

When you or your loved one goes to a doctor's appointment, there should always be someone present without Alzheimer's. This extra person can be an extra set of ears and can write down important information such as strategies that can be used to slow the progression of Alzheimer's and any information about the medications that are prescribed. It's good to have any questions for the doctor written down before the appointment to make sure that everything that needs to be addressed is. Sit down with a loved one to think about important questions that you have. Your doctor may ask you if you have considered home care or assisted living, so you should look into this beforehand and see if it's something you'd consider.

Dialogue in Design Alzheimer's Disease

Physicians

- 1 Do you have difficulty remembering the names of close family members?
- 2 Have you considered or planned for possible home care or assisted living?
- 3 Are you experiencing any side effects from the medication you're taking?

Most Popular Questions Asked

Patients

- 1 What are the names and dosage levels of all of my current medications?
- 2 What strategies can I use to slow the progress of dementia?
- 3 Are there any new medications available or being developed for Alzheimer's Disease?

Living Arrangement

Symptoms Reported

1,286 Alzheimer's Disease conversations recorded by Verilogue from May 2008 through September 2012
*Severity as indicated by physician's post-interaction survey

www.verilogue.com